Let us explain them in more detail, so you will be able to choose the best tool for you: Utilities A utility is any tool which performs one task only. They come in all sizes and shapes. There are a lot of utilities available which can be listed in internet. The most common task performed by a utility is to store files. There are usually two types of utilities, system utility and user utility. System utilities are those tools which reside inside the operating system and they can be run by everyone. The most common user utilities are Image Viewer, which is used to view pictures. To find the file you need to perform Disk Cleanup. This tool does not delete anything. It cleans up free space and files left over by program applications. There is a lot of difference between hard disk and the RAM. When you load program application on your system, that specific space on the hard disk is used as a cache. Once you close the application, you can get the space back to use for other things. However, the cache on the RAM is much smaller. When your computer starts up, there is nothing available in the cache on the RAM. So, the application has to load it from the hard disk. Similarly, when the application is closed, 09e8f5149f
