Little is known about the signaling pathways that control the self-renewal of the germline stem cell (GSC) in the adult gonad. Here, we show that Cdc42 is required for GSC self-renewal in Xenopus. Although Cdc42 is active throughout the GSC lineage and has been shown to regulate GSC division, Cdc42 is normally absent from the GSCs themselves. We found that GSCs lack Cdc42, but have Cdc42-independent and Cdc42-dependent pools of Rac1, a small GTPase that is activated by Cdc42 and known to regulate GSC division. The lack of Cdc42 in the GSCs is due to the cell-autonomous requirement for Cdc42 in the GSCs to initiate and maintain the self-renewal of the GSCs, but to exclude the GSCs from the germline. In addition, activation of Cdc42 in the GSCs is required for their proliferation and/or differentiation into cystocytes. These results identify a molecular requirement for Cdc42 in GSC self-renewal and reveal that the GSCs normally utilize a Cdc42-dependent mechanism to maintain the quiescence of the GSCs. The requirement for Cdc42 in the GSCs may be the basis for the error prone cell-autonomous regulation of GSC self-renewal.Q: What are the implications of using.nav-tabs with AngularJS I was reading about nav-tabs in AngularJS and noticed that Angular's official documentation says to use the ng-click attribute. Exploring the electromagnetic and mechanical properties of a cylindrical nanowire. We investigate the electric and magnetic fields and mechanical response of a nanowire. The focus is on a cylindrical nanowire of diameter  $d$  and length  $L$  which can be considered as a sliver. For appropriate geometries, the sliver is electromagnetically and mechanically resonant, which means that the sliver contains a dominant resonance mode with effective frequency, optical and mechanical quality factors. The structure of the sliver is a resonance wavelength that is determined by the geometric dimensions of the sliver and the excitation frequency, as reflected in the dispersion relation of the effective index. The sliver is a two-dimensional coupled mechanical system of two suspended springs and two contacting membranes. The effective index of the sliver differs significantly from that of a bulk fluid, with the difference increasing with decreasing thickness. The slab is strongly coupled electromagnetically and mechanically and exhibits electromechanical coupling that requires a second order geometry. At the crossing of a dominant resonance, the electric permittivity and magnetic permeability are strongly enhanced. Q: Lodash SortByWith Function I have an array of books, and I want to sort them by the price descending. The structure of my array is an 04aeff104c
