Q: pthread_join() command not working I am trying to join a multi-threaded program on linux. I have implemented a scenario in which a blocking thread puts into a queue and a main thread picks the elements from this queue and prints them and also removes the elements from the queue. I know the problem lies in my implementation as the queue is not getting empty. I know the program is waiting for the thread to complete because the printf() statements are never getting executed even after waiting for a long time. I have tried using pthread_join but I am unable to. I know pthread_join is blocking but it should not be blocking when the calling program is already blocked. If it is blocking is there a better way to implement this? code snippet: void *Producer(void *arg) { int id = *((int *)arg); printf("Producer::%d ", id); pthread_mutex_lock(&th); puts(" producing at id :"); int ret = mQueue.put(id); if(ret == -1) { printf("Unable to put in queue! "); pthread_exit(NULL); } else { printf("Queue empty :%d ",mQueue.size()); mQueue.clear(); printf("Queue is empty :%d ",mQueue.size());
